

2018-2019

1. Experiential Learning

Name: Eco Park Visit

Category: Departmental Activity (Experiential Learning)

Organising Unit: Department of Journalism and Mass Communication

Date: 11-01-2019

Time: 11am onwards

Venue- Eco Park

Number of Students: 09
(Semester 2; 3rd year
General)

Number of Teachers: 2

Number of Beneficiaries: 9

Brief description of the event: The Department of Journalism and Mass Communication had organized this visit for experiential learning with semester 2 and 3rd year general students. We went to the eco-park to give the students an opportunity to take interviews with the visitors. The New Town Eco Park (Prakriti Tirtha) is an urban park in New Town, Kolkata, and is claimed to be the biggest park in India. The park has very rare visual aesthetics, which lead on to several themed areas, activities, and parking. Students take pictures of the surroundings. Students had hands-on experience to understand the visual forms and aesthetic functions of photography. Students also learn how to capture pictures and practice lighting.

Learning outcome: As the students were asked to take pictures of the visitors, they had hands on experience to gain knowledge on the techniques of photography. In order to enhance program- or course-based learning outcomes that specifically aim at employability skills, experiential learning applies theory and academic content to real-life situations, whether in the classroom, the community, or the workplace. Both solo and group work are acceptable approaches. Learning objectives are advanced, reflection is encouraged, and knowledge and skill application is applied in situations that get students ready for the workforce and civic society. The way these experiences are designed forces the learner to be self-reliant, make choices, and accept responsibility for the outcomes.

This topic is included in our CBCS syllabus under SEM 6 (PAPER CODE: JORADSE04T). Our respected speaker showed a power point presentation, some pictures and videos on Women and Media: Indian Perspective.

Learning Outcome: As we have this entitled topic in our syllabus named

Media Gender and Human Rights (PAPER

NAME-DSE03), students participated in this lecture expected to gather knowledge on the role of media in demonstrating Gender and Women. Students learned that the way women are portrayed in the media has been the subject of multiple studies. According to the women studies and media researchers, the media perpetuates sex stereotypes, practices sexism, and distorts the image of women. Women are typically shown as having a subordinate and passive role in a variety of movies, TV shows, and episodes. They are portrayed as housewives, mothers, sisters, sisters-in-law, and other roles that include constant service and care for other family members and community members. Students could analyse the ways in which the media has a role in the shaping of identity women, particularly along intersections of gender, race and class. Speaker had thoroughly explained how various Bengali Television Serials identify the power structure and societal image of a woman in society and promoting the social justice and human rights of women in contemporary society.

These changes were a part of a broader Expressionist movement that affected north and central European culture in areas like architecture, dance, painting, sculpture, and film. To help our students with any questions they had, we set up a question-and-answer session.

Outcome: Students came to know about the renowned expressionism films like ‘The Student of Prague’ (1913), ‘The Cabinet of Dr. Caligari’ (1920), ‘From Morn to Midnight’ (1920), ‘The Golem: How He Came into the World’ (1920), ‘Genuine’ (1920), ‘Destiny’ (1921), ‘Nosferatu’ (1922), ‘Phantom’ (1922), and ‘Schatten’ (1923) are some of the earliest expressionist films, and they all include a strong symbolic and stylized element. Students learned that, as the name implies, German expressionist filmmakers portrayed the inner turmoil, fears, and ambitions of that age through visual distortion and hyper-expressive acting. German Expressionism gives the problems of its German audience of the 1920s an unavoidably exterior presence, reflecting their internal tensions. This informative Lecture was attended with enthusiasm by all 30 students of the department. Our department successfully handled the question-and-answer session, which helped students learn more specifically about Expressionism era.

Perception”. Biswajit Mondal Assistant Professor, Geography, Nahata JNMS Mahavidyalaya, presented an insightful talk on “Man-made Disaster and its effect on Society”. Dr. Sourav Gupta, Assistant Professor, Journalism and Mass Communication, Central University, Odisha, gave an insightful lecture on Role of Media in Disaster Management – A Study of HAM Radio in Odisha. Our respected speakers showed power point presentations, some pictures and videos on their respective topics. Respected Speaker Dr. Sourav Gupta from the Department of Journalism and Mass Communication explained that in times of crisis and natural catastrophes, amateur radio (HAM radio) is frequently utilized as an emergency communication method when wirelines, cell phones, and other conventional terrestrial means of communication malfunction. HAM radio is not affected by network overload caused by cellular phones, in contrast to commercial systems. To help our students with any questions they had, we set up a question-and-answer session.

Learning Outcome of the Programme:

Students came to know that Sundarban region is extremely vulnerable to tropical cyclones and their aftereffects, which might include salt water incursion, wall breaching, and flooding brought on by storm surges. It seriously impairs quality of life and livelihood. All the students had a clear vision on disaster perception. They gathered knowledge about The National Disaster Management Authority in India. They learned that NDMA is in charge of making plans to lessen the consequences of natural catastrophes as well as to foresee and prevent man-made disasters. Additionally, it manages how government agencies strengthen their capacities and respond to emergencies and disasters. Students also came to know that Ham radio serves as a powerful tool for raising awareness about disasters and aiding in preparation and disaster prevention. The media can inform the people before a crisis, but it is actually during the tragedy that it is most important. Disseminating information and raising awareness of the problem. This informative Lecture was attended with enthusiasm by all 178 students of the department. Our department successfully handled the question-and-answer session, which helped students learn more specifically about ham radio and its uses to combat.

Our respected speaker showed power point presentation, some pictures and videos on online teaching and how to prepare the e-content for students in pandemic situation when all the school and colleges were closed to combat covid 19 era. To help our students with any questions they had, we set up a question-and-answer session.

Learning Outcome: During Covid 19 period teachers were also limited in their ability to instruct students through innovative means because of the nature of the online format. Some found it very challenging to make learning engaging and to engage their students in virtual space; they were used to using real items and role-playing to engage students in the classroom. This hands-on training webinar helped both the teacher and student to understand the mode of online teaching learning process. Students came to know that the creation of a society that is rich in information is the goal of e-content development. Each member of society has the ability to produce, acquire, exchange, and use information for their own advancement. This informative Lecture was attended with enthusiasm by all 111 students of the department. Our department successfully handled the question-and-answer session, which helped students learn more specifically about the theme of the lecture.

18. Experiential Learning

Name of the Activity: Visit to Science City

Category: Departmental Activity (Experiential Learning)

Organising Unit:

Department of Journalism and Mass Communication

Date: 7/6/2022

Time: 10-5pm.

Venue: Science City

Number of Students: 26

Number of Teachers: 3

Number of Beneficiaries: 26

Brief description of the event: The department of Journalism and Mass Communication had organised an experiential learning visit to Science City. Teachers asked the students to take interviews of the visitors there. They wrote a science feature. One must have a great command of language and the "gift of gab" in order to produce a quality feature story. The writer must also possess the necessary creative ability and critical thinking abilities to approach the subject from several angles. These are some essential and vital components that can help our feature become a compelling read and help you become recognized as a talented feature writer.

Learning Outcome: They were able to comprehend what a feature story means due to this hands-on learning trip to Science City. The distinctions between a "news story" and a "feature," a "editorial" and a "feature," and a "backgrounder" and a "feature" are all understood by the students. They also learn about the different kinds, types, and categories of features, write a feature article themselves, and, lastly, comprehend how to write features for a living. Students came to know that feature had many different types and are widely used in magazines, newspapers and online. A feature will often cover an issue in greater depth than a news story would do; or it might look at an ongoing story from a different angle. All 26 students of the department were incredibly excited to attend this educational visit.

Number of Beneficiaries: 20

Brief description of the event: An extension lecture was conducted by the department of Journalism and Mass Communication on 2/03/2022. Mr. Arghya

Bandopadhyay, Special Correspondent; Ei Samay, gave an insightful lecture on Sports Journalism. Our distinguished speaker talked about how the number of stakeholders has increased as the sports sector has grown. At the municipal, regional, national, and international levels, a great deal of competitions and events are being held in a variety of games. The government is attempting to raise awareness and encourage citizens to participate in sports starting in elementary school as a result of realizing the value of sports. All social classes and professions are having talks and debates about sports and sports legislation. Numerous sports-related TV and radio stations, newspapers, magazines, and websites have started to meet this need of sports entertainment and information. His informative talk and wealth of sports knowledge were excellent. To help our students with any questions they had, we set up a question-and-answer session.

Learning Outcome: Students came to know that in reporting the news, they will also be expected to analyze the game. After earning your degree in sports journalism, one can work in publications, radio, and television. Nowadays, online media is growing quickly, broadening the range of possible careers in this area.

Students will be able to know the development and spread of sports in India; enumerate the advantages of sports for society; talk about the state of sports reporting in the media nowadays; enumerate the attributes and competencies expected of a sports writer; and talk about the new directions in sports journalism. Our department successfully handled the question-and-answer session, which helped students learn more specifically about Sports journalism.

Journalism and Mass Communication- Honours. Dr. Sujata Mukherjee, Assistant Professor and Head, Dept of Journalism and Mass Communication, HMM College for Women, was the resource person for that day. The topic of the lecture was “Transmedia Storytelling: Selling a lifetime of Experience using Digital Technology”. Our eminent speaker gave an insightful lecture on Trans-media storytelling. As our esteemed speaker explained that the concept of delivering a single story or story experience across numerous platforms and formats using modern digital technology is known as transmedia storytelling, also referred to as transmedia narrative or multiplatform storytelling. Our distinguished speaker talked about how the entertainment sector has adopted transmedia storytelling and seen its potential for building profitable franchises.

Learning outcome: Through this thought-provoking discussion, students gain a knowledge of how trans-media storytelling enables the telling of personal stories from the perspective of an audience that may not be familiar with the author's own experiences. Additionally, social media platforms and websites like YouTube make it simple to share digital stories with others. Multimedia tools are used in digital storytelling to bring stories to life. Additionally, they learned how digital stories can be used to present an argument, retell a historical event, teach an idea, or reflect on a personal experience. Videos that tell a story using audio, visuals, and video clips are called digital stories. All the teachers and 30 students were present there. After the lecture there was a question answer session for the listeners. The lecture was interactive and students got the opportunities to enhance their knowledge.

21. Experiential Learning

Name: Experiential Learning

Topic: Book fair Reporting

Category: Departmental Activity (Experiential Learning)

Organising Unit: Department of Journalism and Mass Communication

Date: 10/2/2023

Time: 11am onwards

Venue: Kolkata Book Fair

Number of Students: 36

Number of Teachers: 4

Number of Beneficiaries: 36

Brief description of the event: The Department of Journalism and Mass Communication had organized this visit for experiential learning with semester 2, 4 and 6 students. We went to the 46th Kolkata Book Fair, so that the students could conduct interviews with visitors or book lovers. Spain was the theme country for International Kolkata Book fair. Students were asked to take pictures of the surroundings. Students had hands-on experience to understand the visual forms and aesthetic functions of photography. Students also learn how to capture pictures and practice lighting.

Learning outcome: As the students were asked to take pictures and conduct an interview of the visitors, they had hands on experience to gain knowledge on the techniques of photography and gather knowledge to make questionnaire. Experiential learning, advances students' work and life skills, promotes deeper learning, and improves academic results. What constitutes a journalistic interview, journalistic interviewing techniques, and considerations are all covered in this piece. Students will be able to understand the various ways of gathering information by asking people questions. They will understand how to decide between the different types of interviews and also developed the skills needed for approaching different types of interviews. Students will be able to comprehend that a journalist interview consists of an exchange of ideas between a journalist and a source who offers details on a certain topic or issue. The purpose of an interview is to give journalists first-hand knowledge about a specific topic so they may utilize it to write stories, produce content, or research it further. This experiential learning visit is very crucial part of their learning because through this, students get an understanding of their abilities to build relationships and sources, observe with objectivity, communicate clearly, work well in a team, and handle pressure from both inside and outside the news organization.

in celebration of Satyajit Ray's
Birth Anniversary
On
Date: 2nd May , 2023
Venue: Room 35
Time: 12 pm onwards

Satyajit Ray on 2nd May 2023, the department of Journalism and Mass

Communication in collaboration with IQAC held the screening of MAHANAGAR - one of the renowned films directed by the ace director. This film exhibits the middle-class morality of the 60's and shows how development enforces change in gender roles. Mahanagar is based on Abataranika, a novel by Narendranath Mitra narrating the story of a housewife who sheds her traditionalist family by getting job as a saleswoman and hence breaking a number of gender roles. The altered power equations in a patriarchal, lower middle class Bengali household strengthens feminism and women empowerment depicted through the plot, dialogues, body language and self-confidence of the different characters portrayed. 16 students of Journalism and Mass Communication watched the film from 12pm onwards.

Learning Outcome – The students will have a knowledge about the film's content, form and structure and develop an understanding of film language, terminology further leading to analysing the ways in which film language constructs meaning and ideology. The students will understand the relationship between film form and its historical and cultural contexts. After seeing the entire film, the students will be able to describe how a film offers a set of social, political and cultural ideas and questions through form and content. The students will also be able to build active viewing skills and write a film review. Playing a movie for students to practice character and topic analysis is a great teaching method because many students need a visual aid to fully comprehend a concept. Students can also learn how location, mood, and atmosphere are produced and utilized for effect by screening movies.

23. Celebration of National Cinema Day

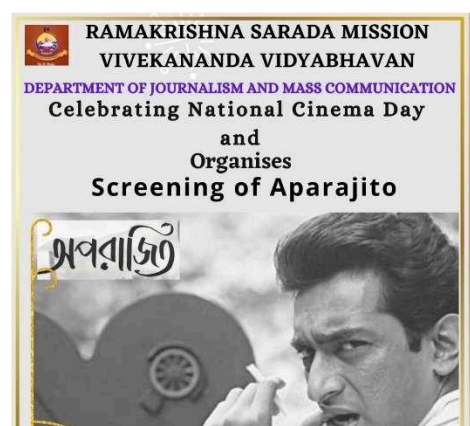

Name of the Event – National Cinema Day Celebration: Screening of Aparajito

Category: Departmental Activity (Celebration)

Organizing unit – Department of Journalism and Mass Communication

Time – 11:15 am – 1:45 pm.

Venue- Room Number 15, RKSMVV

Number of students – 15

Number of teachers – 4

Number of Beneficiaries- 15

Brief description of the event – To celebrate the National Cinema Day, the screening of the much-famed film ‘APARAJITO’ directed by Anik Dutta was shown to the students. The film is a tribute to Satyajit Ray. The film follows the struggles and success story of a young ad professional, Aparajito Ray while making his debut film, Pather Padaboli. 15 students of the department of Journalism and Mass Communication celebrated the National Cinema Day with much enthusiasm. After the screening of the film, the students had a group discussion where they discussed different aspects of the film. They also wrote a film review of the same.

Learning Outcomes- The students will have a knowledge about the film’s content, form and structure and develop an understanding of film language, terminology further leading to analyzing the ways in which film language constructs meaning and ideology. The students will understand the relationship between film form and its historical and cultural contexts. After seeing the entire film, the students will be able to describe how a film offers a set of social, political and cultural ideas and questions through form and content. The ability to study film from a range of disciplinary perspectives will enable students to appreciate the beauty of the cinematic language that indicates certain of our greatest cultural stories, in addition to being able to interpret the complex visual texts that influence our image-driven society. The students will also be able to build active viewing skills and write a film review. Playing a movie for students to practice character and topic analysis is a great teaching method because many students need a visual aid to fully comprehend a concept. Students can also learn how location, mood, and atmosphere are produced and utilized for effect by screening movies.

Date – 3/5/2023

Time – 12 pm. Onwards

Venue- College Campus, RKSMVV

Number of students – 15

Number of teachers – 4

Number of Beneficiaries- 15

Brief description of the event

– The students of the department of Journalism and Mass Communication made a pictorial representation through posters and chart to celebrate the 30th anniversary of

World Press Freedom Day.

World Press Freedom Day,

also known as World Press Day, was established by the UN General Assembly on

May 3rd to commemorate the anniversary of the Windhoek Declaration, a declaration of free press principles drafted by African newspaper journalists in Windhoek in 1991, and to draw attention to the value of press freedom. The declaration also serves as a reminder to governments of their obligation to respect and uphold the right to freedom of expression as guaranteed by Article 19 of the 1948 Universal Declaration of Human Rights. World Press Freedom Day was proclaimed by the UN General Assembly in December 1993, following the recommendation of UNESCO'S General Conference. Through their pictorial representation they voiced on fundamental principles of press freedom and its need. With the help of 15 students, two charts were made for the event.

Learning Outcome – Being associated with the department of Journalism and Mass Communication, they would honour the essential components of the freedom of the press. They would be able to assess the status of press freedom in various parts of the world and compare the status and data with our country, India. Being a media student, they can also play an active role in informing general public about the violations against media people. They would also have knowledge about how important is press freedom in fostering democracy and also why MEDIA is the fourth pillar of democracy. The poster or chart design format will become more understandable to the students. Students will gain knowledge of picture editing methods and how to use colour palettes that are confined. The use of images and content production from various sources will be understood by the students. Students will also get a visual assistance that will aid in their understanding of the content. Students' attention spans can be maintained during lessons with the aid of an engaging charts. It might also serve as a reminder of the lessons after the event.

25. World Radio Day Celebration

Name of the Event – World Radio Day Celebration

Category- Departmental Activity (Celebration)

Organizing unit – Department of Journalism and Mass Communication

Date – 13/2/2023

Time – 1:45 onwards

Venue- Room Number 15 &
College Campus, RKSMVV

Number of students – 6

Number of teachers – 4

Number of Beneficiaries- 6

Brief description of the event – The students of the department of Journalism and Mass Communication gave a Power point presentation and made a poster to celebrate World Radio Day. This day is an international day celebrated on the 13th of February each year. The Day was decided by UNESCO on 3 November 2011 during its 36th conference. "New World, New Radio" was the topic for 2021, and it highlighted how radio shaped and adjusted to the changes brought about by the COVID-19 epidemic. World Radio Day 2023 was celebrated on Monday 13 February. The theme for the 12th edition of World Radio Day was “Radio and Peace “. UNESCO highlights independent radio as a pillar for conflict prevention and peacebuilding. Through their pictorial representation they voiced on fundamental principles of press freedom and its need.

Learning Outcome – Being associated with the department of Journalism and Mass Communication, they would honour to spread awareness about the radio as a medium of providing information on diverse cultures and traditions through the power point presentation and poster making event. Since the century, it played an important role in the life of people and so this year's theme is focussing on radio and its diversity. Radio is a powerful medium for celebrating humanity in all its diversity and constitutes a platform for democratic discourse. Students can also play an active role in informing general public about the violations against media people. The poster or chart design format will become more understandable to the students. Students will gain knowledge of picture editing methods and how to use colour palettes that are confined. Posters make it simple for individuals to obtain information. It gives people who prefer visuals over words (such as people from various backgrounds whose native tongue is not the dominant language) that can be the easier methods to process information. The use of images and content production from various sources will be understood by the students. Students will also get a visual assistance that will aid in their understanding of the content. Students' attention spans can be maintained during lessons with the aid of an engaging charts. It might also serve as a reminder of the lessons after the event.

Brief

Description of the event: Sarat Chandra Chattopadhyay is a famous name and was quite popular among the locals. In the Deulti, there is a Sarat Chandra Kuthi, a historical site that West Bengal tourism has maintained and repaired. You will feel incredibly satisfied after taking a tour of the legendary author's former residence.

Bagnan's west in the West Bengali district of Howrah. There is the greatest tranquillity permeating the space. Although the Photographical Appreciation course (Sem 5: Paper Name: DSE02/Paper Code: GE2) is on our honours and general syllabuses, this event is organized by the Department of Journalism. Mass communication and journalism students took pictures.

Program Outcome: Students had hands-on experience to understand the visual forms and aesthetic functions of photography. Students came to know the technical part of the photography, use of Shutter speed, use of Camera aperture. Students were able to process information about different types of cameras and its uses in photography. Students will learn how to evaluate and understand news through this educational excursion.

Students learned photography techniques, which can also help them express their artistic vision and view the world in novel ways. They also understand the role of aperture, shutter speed and ISO in photography; and improve their photography skills. Students also learn how to capture pictures and practice lighting. Students' intellectual and psychological growth is positively impacted by field trips or excursion. Along with enriching cultures and raising self-esteem, they also improve learning and academic performance and social skills and confidence. We should make sure that field trips are included in their curriculum.

Brief description of the event: An extension lecture was conducted by the Department of Journalism and Mass Communication. Dr. Pallav Mukhopadhyay, Assistant Professor, Department of Journalism and Mass Communication, West Bengal State University, gave an insightful lecture on

Development Communication and film as a medium of communication for Development. His informative talk and knowledge in development communication were excellent. To help our students with any questions they had, we set up a question-and-answer session.

Learning Outcome: Students came to know that a film has advantages and downsides as a communication tool and the term "development communication" describes the application of communication to support social development. Techniques for development communication include behaviour modification, social marketing, media advocacy, community engagement, information sharing and education, and social mobilization. One of the most obvious and important advantages of using a movie as a communication tool is the chance to convey an argument visually and, as a result, forge a better connection with the audience. Students discovered that there are three methods for connecting communication to development. These are multiplicity of information, empathy, and dissemination. Our department successfully handled the question-and-answer session, which helped students learn more specifically about Development communication and film as a medium of communication for Development.

Brief description of the event – A One day Workshop titled “Digital Hygiene and Understanding Misinformation” was organised by the Department of Journalism and Mass Communication, RKSMVV in collaboration with IQAC on 02/12/22. The speaker Mr. Joydeep Das Gupta was brilliant and explained beautifully how to understand the misinformation in the pool of digital media channels. Being a representative of Google Network, he mainly focused on identification of Fake news on Google. Our eminent speaker explained that false or misleading information that poses as reliable news is referred to as fake news. Fake news typically belongs to one of two categories:

- Stories that are purposefully erroneous, meaning that the authors are aware of their falsity yet choose to publish them anyhow. This could be done to influence public opinion or increase visitors to a certain website.
- Narratives with some truth to them, but largely false. This could occur from the author's failure to verify all of their information or from their exaggeration of some details in order to support a point.

Outcomes- The Workshop was very insightful for the students. Our students obtained a lot of information from the workshop. The term "fake news" was first used in the 19th century, so students learned that misinformation is not a new phenomenon, but that its creation and dissemination have changed as a result of the internet and social media. Before the internet, news was typically obtained via reliable media outlets whose reporters had to abide by stringent ethical standards. With few editorial standards or oversight, the internet made it possible to produce, exchange, and consume news and information in new ways. Nowadays, a lot of people get their news from social media and other online sources, but it's not always simple to tell which stories are true and which are not. All the four teachers and students were present and did all the Hands-on activities enthusiastically.

Brief description of the event – A One-day Workshop titled “Understanding the Audio Landscape through Radio Talk & Radio News Script” was organised by the department of Journalism and Mass Communication, RKSMVV in collaboration with IQAC, on 16/12/22. The speaker, eminent Radio Jockey (RJ) Smt. Chayanika Dutta Gupta was excellent in her enriched lecture. She shared her real-life experience as a RJ and did some hands-on activities with students on radio script that day. So as for the presenter to be successful, they must persuade the audience to tune in to the program. It is clear that a presenter's function becomes essential in building and sustaining a lively relationship with the listener who is not visible. Because of its baffling diversity, India is virtually always the case when the profile of the unseen listener is complex and diversified, making it even more so. The task of providing services to all social classes without discrimination or exclusion is particularly large for public service broadcasters, which makes the presenter's position even more important. She also discussed that since radio is a sound medium, radio hosts should have a pleasant, high-quality voice, command of the broadcast language or accent, clear pronunciation, good diction, confidence, and a natural flow of speech. They ought to possess "the gift of the gab," which is another term for "the ability to speak with eloquence and fluency."

Learning Outcome- Following the workshop, students will have gained an understanding of the significance of presentations, be able to recognize different types of presenters and their qualities, be able to adapt a script for radio use, and, with enough planning and practice, create their own unique presentation style. Students came to know that since radio is a sound medium, radio hosts should have a pleasant, high-quality voice, command of the broadcast language or accent, clear pronunciation, good diction, confidence, and a natural flow of speech. They ought to possess "the gift of the gab," which is another term for "the ability to speak with eloquence and fluency". Presenters serve as the connection between the broadcasting organization and its audience, functioning as its spokespeople. The listener connects with the presenters and builds a rapport with them, even when the organization's internal hierarchy and program production team stay in the background. A presenter is something like a salesperson in that they are expected to be fully informed on the nature, substance, and tone of the program they will be presenting. All the four faculties & 34 students of this department enthusiastically participated in this fruitful workshop.
