Number of Participants: 15 students of SEM-6

Brief description of the event :

This extension lecture was organised by the Geography department of RKSMVV for the students of Semester 6. The session mainly focused on the evolution of Critical geography, Behavioural and Humanistic geography which is an important part of the syllabus (CC13- GEOGRAPHICAL THOUGHT).

The program started with brief introduction notes about the resource person. After that the session was handed over to the speaker. She continued her presentation for 2 hours. She cleared all the doubts of the students. The lecture ended with a vote of thanks to the resource person, all students, and also the organising units of the department.

Programme Outcome :

Students gained a clearer understanding of the concept of critical geography, its significance and how it deals with spatial relations. On the other hand, Humanistic geography was largely based on the experiences and perceptions of humans which were mental constructs and were essentially abstract. Humanistic geography examines people's relationships with various places and spaces & Behavioural geography, specifically, focuses on how people's experiences, ideas, and perceptions influence how people make decisions and behave in certain places and environments. Radical geography is an approach to geographic research that seeks to understand social and spatial problems and to advocate solutions. The followers of the radical approach in geography mainly concentrated on issues of great social relevance like inequality, racism, sexism, crime, delinquency, discrimination against blacks and non-whites, females, exploitation of juveniles and environmental resources etc. The interaction session with students at the end of the talk was also very important and interesting.
