Brief description of the event – A State Level Seminar has been organised by the Departments of Human Rights and Geography in collaboration with IQAC, on 22nd May 2024 at Room no 8. The Convention seeks to address all threats to biodiversity and ecosystem services. In 2000, the UN General Assembly officially proclaimed May 22 to be the International Day for Biodiversity (IDB). The date was chosen to celebrate the adoption of the initial text of the CBD, The Theme of Biodiversity Day 2024: “Be Part of the Plan”. Students have also presented a PPT Presentation on Conservation on “Biological Diversity and Rights”

Programme Outcome – Students came to know the viable population of species including full complement of native species, required for maintenance of ecosystem function, improved status of species at risk, no new species extinctions due to human activity, and species assemblages maintained in their ecological regions.
